

Homeoprophylaxis: The Vaccine Alternative

Imagine a method of disease prevention that is safe, natural, and causes no tears. Imagine no preservatives, no chemicals and no side effects. Ideally, this method would also be safe and gentle, and would serve to exercise and educate your child's immune system in a logical way while providing life-long immunity.

Homeoprophylaxis satisfies the process of naturally acquired immunity by providing a tiny dose of the disease, but without any of the risks. This is done through the use of remedies, called "nosodes". James Compron Burnett, a homeopath contemporary to the development of the smallpox and rabies vaccines, was the first doctor to warn against the dangers of vaccination and the use of material disease agents to protect against serious diseases. He believed that vaccination generated a state of disease of its own. Burnett proposed the use of a homeopathic potency of the disease as a less harmful way to encourage an immune system response without the introduction of the actual disease material into the blood, and without the "extras", such as the heavy metals which are frequently a component of vaccine serum. A 1985 study by a group of naturopathic physicians showed the following results regarding vaccinated vs. unvaccinated: 11% more vaccinated children developed asthma, 8% more displayed eczema, 11% more were susceptible to chronic ear infections, 6% more acquired allergies, and 5% more had behavioral issues.

It is important to know that nosodes and all other remedies do not contain chemicals or other additives; they simply stimulate general immune system responses to a specific disease. The number of molecules of the original substance in an average homeopathic remedy is less than one in Avogadro's number ($1/602200000000000000000000$). This is about the same frequency as we would find of any substance on earth in a handful of dirt. Over time with repeated dosing, the general immune system triggers the specific immune system to produce antibodies followed by cell-mediated immunity. All levels of the immune system have been educated toward a complete immunological response, so future exposures will not result in sickness.

If one has been exposed to a disease, then the process of the disease must go on. Giving a remedy at this time will help facilitate the process.

The very best protection is a series of remedies at regular intervals which have been chosen as resonant with that person. This may include both nosodes and others. Individualized in this manner, the protocol will not be identical for any two family members.

Please contact Beverly 513-489-9777 for information on how the SCIO Resonance Device may be used to create a series tailored to you or to your child.

A standard one-hour SCIO session costs $110