

The Light that Heals

The Q-Laser is #1 in the world for low-level laser treatment and is also known as the light that heals. Low-level lasers, utilizing a light promoting healing, are effective in pain management and overall well-being beginning with the cellular level. Each cell of the body can become less active or die due to the loss of electrons. The energy within the cell can be re-generated through the low-level laser treatments. This type of energy treatment allows nutrients to pass through the cells, thus promoting activity and increasing the electrons within the cells.

The light therapy is known for increasing cell metabolism, developing muscle tissue and collagen, improving circulation, stimulating tissue repair and wound healing, stimulating the nervous system, and stimulation of the immune system. It is a non-invasive therapy which utilizes a special type of light that penetrates the skin and the underlying tissues infiltrating photon energy. The body then experiences reduced pain, reduced inflammation, muscle relaxation, re-energizing of cells, promotes quicker healing, increases bone repair, and enhances the body's natural defense mechanisms.

The literature on low-level laser treatment continuously reports on the effectiveness of soft laser therapy effectiveness in regards to:
